This is a great story about a library very much like ours - one director with two part-time workers. I had the opportunity to meet this director, Scott Bonner, last week at the Missouri Public Library Directors meeting in Springfield and he is a very compassionate and serious young man with a very big heart. A well-deserved award!

Library of the Year: Ferguson Municipal Public Library

The Ferguson Municipal Public Library has been named 2015 Library of the Year by Library Journal and Gale, which noted that the "small suburban library rose above the chaos and stepped up to provide sanctuary and resources for all in a community in crisis and remained steadfast to that call over months of duress. The library leadership's modest "It's what we do" stance resonated worldwide through social media and news coverage. It placed libraries in the center of the solution, and created a model for other libraries in communities experiencing strife."

Last summer, after the shooting of unarmed teenager Mike Brown by police officer Darren Wilson in Ferguson, Mo., sparked demonstrations and civil unrest, Ferguson Library remained open and engaged with its community. Library director Scott Bonner, who earlier this year received the American Library Association's Lemony Snicket Prize for Noble Librarians Faced with Adversity, said, "We did everything we could think of for the people of Ferguson. I wanted to look back on this time and regret saying yes too much instead of saying no too much. We supported our community and welcomed every human being in Ferguson, which is exactly what libraries do. Libraries help you become a better you, and help your community become a better community. I feel like this is really a recognition of the vital, honest work that all libraries do across the country every days."

Mr. Gene Tarpley was the winner of our "Merry Month of May" contest and snagged a $25 gift certificate to the Roundhouse. Congratulations, Gene!

The monthly patron drawings have given way to the adult readers drawing for the summer months, but we will begin the monthly patron drawings for gift certificates to local eating places in August.
